

ROBERT P. VARIAN (STATE BAR NO. 107459)
rvarian@orrick.com
M. TODD SCOTT (STATE BAR NO. 226885)
tscott@orrick.com
ALEX TALARIDES (STATE BAR NO. 268068)
atarides@orrick.com
JASON CABOT (STATE BAR NO. 288877)
jcabot@orrick.com
ORRICK, HERRINGTON & SUTCLIFFE LLP
The Orrick Building
405 Howard Street
San Francisco, California 94105-2669
Telephone: +1-415-773-5700
Facsimile: +1-415-773-5759

Attorneys for Petitioner
23andMe, Inc.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

23ANDME, INC.,

Petitioner,

v.

KAREN DAVIS-HUDSON and SARAH
DIAZ,

Respondents.

Case No. 3:15-CV-1323

PETITIONER 23ANDME, INC.'S
PETITION TO VACATE
ARBITRATION PARTIAL AWARD
AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS
AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
I. INTRODUCTION	1
II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND	4
A. 23andMe.....	4
B. The Arbitration Agreement.....	4
C. The November 22, 2013 FDA Letter	5
D. The Arbitration Claims Based On The FDA Letter	5
E. The Clause Construction Adjudications.....	6
F. The Superior Court Action.....	8
III. ARGUMENT	9
A. The Re-Adjudication Violates The Requirements Of The FAA.....	10
1. The Re-Adjudication Is The Antithesis Of A “Streamlined Proceeding”	11
2. The Process Adopted And Enforced Via Re-Adjudication Contravenes The Intention Of The Parties	12
3. The Process Adopted In The Re-Adjudication Does Not Ensure That The Arbitration Agreement Will Be Enforced According To Its Terms.....	13
4. The Process Adopted In The Re-Adjudication Effectively Requires The Availability Of Class Arbitration.....	13
5. The Re-Adjudication Contravenes Section 10(a)(4) Of The FAA	13
B. The Court Can Determine Which Award Governs	14
C. This Court Can Also Defer To The Determination To Be Made In The San Francisco Superior Court Action	16
D. The Arbitrator’s Award Is Completely Irrational And Exhibits A Manifest Disregard Of Controlling Law	16
1. No Rational Interpretation of Controlling Case Law Could Possibly Justify The Arbitrator’s Award	18
2. The “Rationale” Of The Arbitrator’s Award Underscores The Reasons It Must Be Vacated	20
IV. CONCLUSION	25

TABLE OF AUTHORITIESPage(s)*Cases

Arroyo v. Riverside Auto Holdings , 2013 WL 4997488 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 13, 2013)	18, 24
AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion , 131 S. Ct. 1740 (2011)	10-13
Beeman v. Anthem Prescription Mgmt., LLC , 689 F.3d 1002 (9th Cir. 2012)	18
Chico v. Hilton Worldwide, Inc. , 2014 WL 5088240 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 7, 2014)	18- 20
Comedy Club, Inc. v. Improv W. Associates , 553 F.3d 1277 (9th Cir. 2009)	16-17
Connecticut Light & Power Co. v. Local 420, Int’l Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL-CIO , 718 F.2d 14 (2d Cir. 1983)	15-16
Emps. Ins. of Wausau v. Granite State Ins. Co. , 330 F.3d 1214 (9th Cir. 2003)	18
Freightliner, LLC v. Teamsters Local 305 , 336 F. Supp. 2d 1118 (D. Or. 2004)	17
Garden Fresh Rest. Corp. v. Superior Ct. , 231 Cal. App. 4th 678 (2014)	8- 11
Iskanian v. CLS Transportation L.A. LLC , 59 Cal. 4th 348 (2014)	10
Johnson v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc. , 635 F.3d 401 (9th Cir. 2011)	16
Kinecta Alternative Fin. Solutions, Inc. v. Super. Ct. , 205 Cal. App. 4th 506 (2012)	passim
Reed Elsevier, Inc. ex rel. LexisNexis Div. v. Crockett , 734 F.3d 594 (6th Cir. 2013), cert. denied , 134 S. Ct. 2291 (2014)	11
Lopez v. Ace Cash Express, Inc. , 2012 WL 1655720 (C.D. Cal. May 4, 2012)	18

1	McElroy v. Tenet Health Care Corp. ,
2	2013 WL 4482928 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 21, 2013).....	18, 20
3	Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc. ,
4	473 U.S. 614 (2008).....	10, 12
5	Mortensen v. Bresnan Commc'ns, LLC ,
6	722 F.3d 1151 (9th Cir. 2013).....	10, 13
7	Nelsen v. Legacy Partners Residential, Inc. ,
8	207 Cal. App. 4th 1115 (2012).....	18- 22
9	Network Capital Funding Corp. v. Papke ,
10	178 Cal. Rptr. 3d 658 (2014), review granted on other grounds by 340 P.3d
11	1043 (Cal. 2015)	18, 21- 23
12	Opalinski v. Robert Half Int'l Inc. ,
13	761 F.3d 326 (3d Cir. 2014), cert. denied, 2015 WL 998611 (U.S. Mar. 9,
14	2015)	11
15	Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Super. Ct. ,
16	48 Cal. 4th 665 (2010)	17
17	Preston v. Ferrer ,
18	552 U.S. 346 (2008).....	10
19	Ramos v. Fry's Elecs., Inc. ,
20	2014 WL 6269307 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 17, 2014).....	18, 24
21	Reyes v. Liberman Broad., Inc. ,
22	208 Cal. App. 4th 1537 (2012), review granted on other grounds and then
23	dismissed in light of Iskanian , 59 Cal. 4th 348 (2014)	18, 20, 23
24	Rivera v. Hilton Worldwide, Inc. ,
25	2013 WL 6230604 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 26, 2013).....	18, 20, 24
26	Stolt-Nielsen S.A. v. Animal Feeds Int'l Corp. ,
27	559 U.S. 662 (2010).....	passim
28	Stolt-Nielsen SA v. AnimalFeeds Int'l Corp. ,
	548 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008), rev'd on other grounds, 559 U.S. 662 (2010)	17
	Todd Shipyards Corp. v. Cunard Line, Ltd. ,
	943 F.2d 1056 (9th Cir. 1991).....	17
	Trailways Lines, Inc. v. Trailways Inc. Joint Council ,
	807 F.2d 1416 (8th Cir. 1986).....	15

1	Volt Info. Sciences, Inc. v. Bd. of Trustees of Leland Stanford Junior Univ. ,
2	489 U.S. 468 (1989).....	13
3	Whalley v. The Wet Seal, Inc. ,
4	2013 WL 6057679 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 15, 2013).....	18-22
5	Statutes
6	Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. §§ 1 et seq.	passim

PETITION TO VACATE ARBITRATION PARTIAL AWARD

Petitioner 23andMe, Inc. (“23andMe”) hereby moves the Court, pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 10, to vacate the Partial Final Clause Construction Award, issued by Arbitrator Robert L. Brent in an arbitration administered by the American Arbitration Association (“AAA”) (AAA No. 74-20-1400-0032) and filed on December 23, 2014, in which Respondents Karen Davis-Hudson and Sarah Diaz were the claimants and 23andMe was the respondent. Ex. A.¹ Pursuant to 9 U.S.C. § 6, this Petition is being made in the manner provided by law for the making and hearing of motions. This Petition is based on the supporting memorandum of points and authorities; the accompanying Declaration of Jason G. Cabot, and the arguments of counsel.

JURISDICTION

Petitioner 23andMe, Inc. is a Delaware Corporation, with its principal place of business located at 1390 Shorebird Way, Mountain View, California 94043. Respondent Karen Davis-Hudson is an individual, residing in Birmingham, Alabama. Respondent Sarah Diaz is an individual, residing in Weston, Florida. The amount in controversy exceeds $75,000. This Court has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332. Venue properly lies in this Court pursuant to 9 U.S.C. § 10(a) as the Partial Arbitration Award that is the subject of this Petition was made in this district.

INTRADISTRICT ASSIGNMENT

Pursuant to Local Rules 3-2(c) and 3-5(b), a substantial part of the events giving rise to this Petition occurred in San Francisco County.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

The issues presented on this motion differ from those normally presented on a motion to vacate because the arbitration award in question re-determined a pivotal threshold issue that had just been adjudicated in the same controversy. Because the doctrine of stare decisis does not apply to arbitration awards, in normal circumstances the fact that a second award is inconsistent

¹ All exhibits are attached to the Declaration of Jason G. Cabot in support of this Petition.

1 with an earlier one would not require that it be vacated.

2 The circumstances here are anything but normal, and provide a series of independent
3 grounds for vacating the award. As demonstrated below, the partial award must be vacated 4 because it violates core requirements of the Federal Arbitration Act (the “FAA”), was issued in 5 manifest disregard of the law (in several respects), and is not rationally based on the language of 6 the arbitration agreement.

7 23andMe is a genetic testing company that provides individuals with direct access to their 8 personal genetic information. Following publication of a letter that the Company received from 9 the Food and Drug Administration (the “FDA”), two sets of consumer class action lawyers filed 10 complaints against the Company with the American Arbitration Association (the “AAA”). The 11 complaints were filed on behalf of the same class, and made the same allegations and claims, i.e., 12 that the FDA letter indicated that statements on 23andMe’s website were false or misleading.

13 The all-important threshold question in the dispute was whether 23andMe’s arbitration
14 agreement authorized class members to assert the claims against the Company as a class.
15 Although the complaints asserted the same claims on behalf of the same class, the lawyers could 16 not agree on a co-counsel arrangement to pursue them in a single AAA proceeding, and the 17 question whether the arbitration agreement authorized class members to pursue the claims as a 18 class was adjudicated in a “clause construction” motion in the earlier-filed proceeding.

19 After extensive briefing and argument, a distinguished arbitrator issued a carefully
20 reasoned partial final award, in which he: (1) expressed a strong personal preference for ruling
21 that the arbitration agreement authorized class arbitration; but (2) held that there was no good 22 faith basis for issuing such a ruling because the language of the arbitration agreement and 23 controlling law precluded it. Because the ruling on the clause construction motion adjudicated a 24 threshold question as part of a single controversy (and was plainly correct), that is where the 25 matter should have ended. It did not.

26 The lawyers who filed the clause construction motion the first time provided their motion
27 papers to their colleagues, and the same process began again. In a second clause construction that 28 closely resembled the first, a second set of lawyers asked a new arbitrator to negate the ruling that

1 had just been made, and permit the same class to pursue the same claims, based on the same
2 language in the same arbitration agreement and the same controlling law. The arbitrator then 3 nullified the prior adjudication, despite the absence of any good faith basis for doing so, thereby 4 clearing the path for him to preside over a lucrative class arbitration.

5 As a review of the award against the backdrop of the adjudication it nullified makes 6 unmistakably clear, the second award was issued in manifest disregard of the controlling law, and 7 is not rationally derived from the language of the arbitration agreement. Those defects provide 8 ample grounds for granting this motion, but the award must also be vacated for reasons that are 9 more fundamental.

10 The re-adjudication directly contravenes core purposes, policies and requirements of the 11 FAA as articulated by the Supreme Court, and Section 10(a)(4) of the statute. In addition to 12 being patently unfair, permitting members of the same class to re-litigate the threshold question 13 whether the same arbitration agreement authorizes the class to pursue the same claims against the 14 same company until they get a favorable ruling provides several independent grounds for vacating
15 the award based on the FAA.

16 Because the FAA-related defects are not based on the arbitration agreement, or any factual
17 determination, the reasons for the judicial deference normally accorded arbitration awards on a 18 motion to vacate do not apply. Moreover, in the highly unusual circumstances of this case, in 19 deciding whether to vacate the award the Court can review both of the conflicting awards issued 20 on the same threshold issue and determine which comports with controlling law.

21 When two diametrically opposed awards are rendered on the same issue in the same 22 controversy, the court can -- and should -- consider both awards even though only one of them is 23 challenged on the motion to vacate. This case falls squarely within that category. Enforcing the 24 second award would nullify the first and deprive it of any effect. The same arbitration agreement
25 cannot both preclude and authorize members of the same class to proceed with the same claims
26 on a class-wide basis. As the case law recognizes, such a conflict can only be resolved via a 27 judicial determination.

28 In the alternative, the Court could hold a ruling on this motion in abeyance, pending a judicial determination on the question of whether the arbitration agreement authorizes to assert claims as a class, which will be made by the San Francisco Superior Court via a motion for summary judgment scheduled for hearing on June 1, 2015.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. 23andMe

23andMe is a personal genetics company dedicated to helping consumers access and understand their personal genetic data in a cost-effective manner, and to advancing scientific research in human genetics. The Company was founded in 2006, employs a staff of scientists, participates in medical school and research programs, and has a scientific advisory board composed of recognized experts in human genetics, bioinformatics and computer science.

The Company's product, the Personal Genome Service ("PGS"), was named Invention Of The Year by Time Magazine in 2008, and has recently received its first FDA marketing approval. Customers purchasing the PGS submit DNA via a saliva sample that is tested using state of the art equipment. Based on a reading of nearly 1,000,000 points on the customer's genome, the Company provides raw genetic data and a variety of related information that is accessed on the 23andMe website.

B. The Arbitration Agreement

Customers purchase the PGS on 23andMe's website, pursuant to terms of service that include an arbitration agreement (the "Arbitration Agreement") that provides for binding arbitration before the American Arbitration Association. The Arbitration Agreement provides:

Applicable law and arbitration. Except for any disputes relating to intellectual property rights, obligations, or any infringement claims, any disputes with 23andMe arising out of or relating to the Agreements ("Disputes") shall be governed by California law regardless of your country of origin or where you access 23andMe, and notwithstanding of any conflicts of law principles and the United Nations Convention for the International Sale of Goods. Any Disputes shall be resolved by final and binding arbitration under the rules and auspices of the American Arbitration Association, to be held in San Francisco, California, in English, with a written decision stating legal reasoning issued by the arbitrator(s) at either party's request, and with arbitration costs and reasonable documented attorneys' costs of both parties to be borne by the party that ultimately loses. Either party may obtain injunctive relief (preliminary or permanent) and orders to compel arbitration or enforce arbitral awards in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Ex. B at ¶ 28(b) (underlined emphasis added).

1 C. The November 22, 2013 FDA Letter

2 On November 22, 2013, a letter from the Food and Drug Administration (the “FDA
3 Letter”) directing the Company to discontinue marketing of the health information component of 4 the PGS until it received FDA marketing authorization. The letter did not assert that any 5 statement made by 23andMe with respect to the PGS was inaccurate, and the FDA had been 6 aware that 23andMe was marketing the PGS while the Company was pursuing FDA approvals.

7 D. The Arbitration Claims Based On The FDA Letter

8 The FDA Letter prompted litigation and arbitration claims against 23andMe. The court
9 cases were dismissed on the basis of the 23andMe arbitration agreement, which Judge Lucy Koh 10 determined was valid and enforceable.

11 On December 23, 2013, Mason Livingston and Vladimir Druskin filed a class action
12 complaint and demand for class arbitration with the American Arbitration Association on behalf 13 of a class consisting of “[a]ll persons who purchased a 23andMe Saliva Collection Kit and 14 Personal Genome Service in the United States” (the “Class”). See Ex. C at ¶ 47. Two other
15 members of the Class, Karen Davis-Hudson and Sarah Diaz, filed a second class action complaint
16 and demand for class arbitration with the AAA on behalf of the Class, which was described as 17 “all purchasers of 23andMe’s Saliva Collection Kit and Personal Genome Service.” See Ex. D at 18 ¶ 20.

19 The Livingston and Davis-Hudson complaints were based on the FDA Letter, which was 20 quoted at length, and the same alleged facts. Each asserted the same essential claims (the 21 “Claims”). The Claims asserted on behalf of the Class were based on allegations that statements
22 regarding the PGS were false and misleading in light of the FDA Letter, and that 23andMe had 23 therefore (among other things) violated Sections 17200 et seq. and 17500 et seq. of the California
24 Business & Professions Code, breached warranties, and been unjustly enriched. See Ex. C at 25 ¶¶ 1-4, 59-111; Ex. D at ¶¶ 1-3, 26-73. The complaints also sought the same relief: certification
26 of the class, actual and punitive damages, declaratory relief and attorneys’ fees and costs. See Ex.
27 C at 21; Ex. D at 17.

28 Because members of the same class were asserting the same class action claims as part of

1 the same controversy, 23andMe requested the AAA to consolidate the Davis-Hudson matter with 2 the first-filed Livingston matter, and made the same request of counsel who filed the two 3 complaints. The AAA refused to combine the cases absent agreement of the lawyers asserting 4 claims, who were unable to reach an agreement regarding lead counsel.

5 E. The Clause Construction Adjudications

6 On July 18, 2014 the lawyers who filed the Livingston complaint filed a 12-page “clause
 7 construction brief,” seeking a threshold determination that the Arbitration Agreement authorized
 8 members of the Class to pursue the Claims asserted against 23andMe as a class. Ex. E. 23andMe
 9 filed a 21 page Opposition to the Motion (Ex. F), and Claimants filed a 14 page Reply (Ex. G).
 10 The clause construction motion was argued in person before Yaroslav Sochynsky, a well-known 11 arbitrator with an impeccable reputation, for more than two hours.

12 On September 17, 2014, Mr. Sochynsky issued a carefully reasoned Partial Final Clause 13 Construction Award based on the contract language and controlling case law. Ex. H. Despite his 14 expressed preference for class arbitration (see Ex. H at 8, 13), Mr. Sochynsky held that there was 15 simply no way in which an arbitrator could reach such a result, including because the Arbitration
 16 Agreement was worded exclusively in bilateral terms, and under the controlling case laws there 17 was no good faith basis for ruling that it authorized multilateral class arbitration.

18 The award pointedly explained that there was no good faith basis on which an arbitrator 19 could rule that the Agreement authorized class arbitration: “Given that the 23andMe agreement to 20 arbitrate is clearly framed in bilateral terms, and given the foregoing California precedent, this 21 tribunal sees no reasonable alternative (i.e., one that would be based on a good faith interpretation 22 of the parties’ agreement) but to conclude that the parties in this case did not agree to arbitrate
 23 claims on behalf of a class.” Ex. H at 8. In ruling on the clause construction motion the first time
 24 (the “First Adjudication”), the arbitrator also stated that he was “obliged to follow the law,” 25 irrespective of his preference for class arbitration, and that “this tribunal is not prepared to adopt 26 an interpretation that it cannot justify by a good faith construction of the language used by the 27 parties in their arbitration agreement, simply in order to reach what might be considered a desired
 28 result.” Ex. H at 13.

On September 18, 2014, the very next day, different members of the Class filed a second clause construction motion, after counsel provided them with the motion papers filed in connection with the motion the first time it was filed. The motion sought to re-litigate the precise question determined in the First Adjudication, i.e., whether the Arbitration Agreement authorized the Class to assert the Claims against 23andMe as a class. Ex. I.

The Company was forced to file a second 27-page Opposition (Ex. J), which argued that the issue had already been adjudicated, and provided the arbitrator with the Livingston award, and the brief 23andMe filed in connection with the First Adjudication. The Opposition also included a table identifying the repetition of arguments from the clause construction motion when it was filed the first time, and where the arguments were refuted in the first Opposition and rejected in the First Adjudication:

CLAIMANTS' ARGUMENT (EX. I)	ARGUED IN LIVINGSTON (EX. E)	REFUTED IN LIVINGSTON (EX. F)	ADJUDICATED IN CLAUSE CONSTRUCTION AWARD (EX. H)
The arbitration clause applies to "any disputes" with 23andMe arising out of or relating to the agreement (Cls.' Mem. at 5-8)	Argued at p. 8	Refuted at p. 14	Rejected at p. 9
The arbitration clause provides that California law, which favors class arbitration, governs (Cls.' Mem. at 12-13)	Argued at pp. 6-7	Refuted at pp. 12-14	Rejected at p. 9
Any ambiguities within the arbitration clause must be construed against 23andMe, as the drafter (Cls.' Mem. at 13)	Argued at pp. 10-11	Refuted at pp. 6-7, 16	Rejected at p. 11
The arbitration clause explicitly requires that such disputes be resolved by "arbitration under the rules and auspices" of the AAA, which accommodate class action arbitration (Cls.' Mem. at 8-10)	Argued at p. 9	Refuted at pp. 18-19	Rejected without comment ²
The arbitration clause does not exclude class arbitration even though it makes exceptions for intellectual property claims and claims for injunctive relief (Cls.' Mem. at 10-12)	Argued at pp. 8-11	Refuted at p. 16	Rejected at p. 10

² Mr. Sochynsky did not specifically address this argument because Rule 3 of the AAA's Supplementary Rules for Class Arbitration specifically forbids consideration of the AAA rules in determining whether an arbitration agreement authorizes class arbitration.

1 Claimants filed an 18-page Reply (Ex. K) and the threshold question whether the 2 Arbitration Agreement authorized the Class to pursue the Claims as a class was argued again, for 3 approximately three hours, on December 2, 2014. In a transparently result-oriented and at times
 4 incomprehensible award (Ex. A), the arbitrator negated the First Adjudication, and held that the 5 Arbitration Agreement authorized the Class to assert the Claims as a class (the 6 “Re-Adjudication”).

7 On January 14, 2015 the Livingston award was confirmed by the San Francisco Superior
 8 Court, and reduced to a judgment. Ex. L. After the briefing on the second clause construction 9 motion was completed, the California Court of Appeal decided Garden Fresh Rest. Corp. v.
 10 Superior Ct., 231 Cal. App. 4th 678 (2014), which held that the question whether an arbitration
 11 agreement authorizes class action arbitration is “vastly more consequential” than the gateway 12 question whether there is an enforceable agreement to arbitrate, and that the question was 13 therefore a gateway issue to be determined by the courts. Id. at 687.

14 23andMe filed a motion for reconsideration of the award issued in the Re-Adjudication
 15 (Ex. M) on January 21, 2015. Among other things, the motion demonstrated how and why
 16 permitting members of the Class to re-litigate the pivotal threshold question whether they can 17 pursue the Claims as a class until they find an arbitrator willing to rule in their favor is directly 18 contrary to the requirements and language of the FAA. The motion demonstrated how and why 19 the Re-Adjudication manifestly disregarded the controlling case law, including Stolt-Nielsen and 20 a host of California cases applying Stolt-Nielsen to arbitration agreements virtually identical to 21 the 23andMe Agreement. It further demonstrated that the award was not rationally derived from 22 the language of the Arbitration Agreement.

23 The arbitrator denied the motion for reconsideration without argument on March 2, 2015.
 24 Ex. N. The ruling recites the procedural background and documents filed, states that the 25 arbitrator had read the documents, and then simply states that the motion “is Denied.”

26 F. The Superior Court Action

27 On February 13, 2015, the lawyers who filed the Livingston arbitration complaint found 28 another member of the Class, and filed an action for declaratory relief against 23andMe in San 1 Francisco Superior Court (the “San Francisco Superior Court Action”). Ex. O.

2 After highlighting the conflicting arbitrator rulings on the same threshold question the 3 First Adjudication and its nullification in the Re-Adjudication (Ex. O ¶ 2), the complaint cites
 4 Garden Fresh and two recent federal decisions, and alleges that the question whether the 5 Arbitration Agreement authorizes class arbitration is a gateway question that must be decided by 6 a court (Ex. O ¶¶ 4, 5, 17). On that basis -- and because a judicial determination provides the 7 only means of resolving the issue with finality -- the San Francisco Superior Court Action seeks a 8 judicial determination whether the Arbitration Agreement authorizes class arbitration.

9 The parties to the San Francisco Superior Court Action have stipulated to a briefing
 10 schedule with respect to judicial determination of the gateway question whether the Arbitration
 11 Agreement authorizes the Class to assert the Claims as a class via a motion for summary
 12 judgment. A hearing on the motion is scheduled for June 1, 2015.

13 III. ARGUMENT

14 The Re-Adjudication collides head-on with the policies, objectives and requirements of 15 the FAA as articulated by the Supreme Court, and with the language of the statute. As the 16 Supreme Court’s decision in Stolt-Nielsen makes clear, the award can be vacated on that basis
 17 alone. The award should also be vacated because the arbitrator acted in manifest disregard of the 18 FAA, and acted in excess of his powers.

19 Because the Re-Adjudication produced an award that is diametrically opposed to a 20 just-issued adjudication of the same threshold issue in the same controversy, this is not the normal 21 situation presented on a motion to vacate an arbitration award. In such unusual circumstances the 22 Court can consider both awards together -- even though only one is the subject of the motion to 23 vacate -- and determine which one comports with the contract and controlling law. Indeed, a 24 judicial determination of the issue is the only means of adjudicating it in a manner that is mutual 25 and final.

26 Alternatively, if the Court is for any reason not inclined to follow that procedure, it could 27 defer to the judicial determination whether the 23andMe arbitration agreement authorizes class
 28 arbitration that will be made in the San Francisco Superior Court Action. That result would be

1 consistent with California law as enunciated in a recent California Court of Appeal decision
 2 holding that the question of whether an arbitration agreement authorizes class arbitration is a 3 gateway question to be decided by a court.

4 The award must also be vacated because it was rendered in manifest disregard of 5 controlling law that mandated the opposite ruling. The fact that the award is not rationally
 6 derived from the language of the Arbitration Agreement provides a further ground on which it
 7 should be vacated.

8 A. The Re-Adjudication Violates The Requirements Of The FAA

9 The FAA was enacted under the Commerce Clause and establishes a national framework
 10 for arbitrations and arbitration agreements that affect interstate commerce. See, e.g., 9 USC §§ 1-11 2; AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion, 131 S. Ct. 1740, 1745 (2011). Accordingly, federal and 12 state courts can vacate arbitration awards, and invalidate statutes and judicial rules, when they 13 violate the purposes, policies and requirements of the FAA, or create an obstacle to 14 accomplishment of the Act’s objectives or scheme inconsistent with the statute, or interfere with 15 fundamental attributes of arbitration. See, e.g., Concepcion, 131 S. Ct. at 1745 (striking down 16 judicial rule where it “stood as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full 17 purposes and objectives” of the Act); Stolt-Nielsen S.A. v. Animal Feeds Int’l Corp., 559 U.S.
 18 662, 682 (2010) (vacating award where it failed to “give effect to the contractual rights and 19 expectations of the parties”); Mortensen v. Bresnan Commc’ns, LLC, 722 F.3d 1151, 1162 (9th 20 Cir. 2013); Iskanian v. CLS Transportation L.A. LLC, 59 Cal. 4th 348, 366 (2014).

21 As the Supreme Court has held, the “overarching purpose of the FAA, evident in its 22 text . . . is to ensure the enforcement of arbitration agreements according to their terms, so as to 23 facilitate streamlined proceedings.” Concepcion, 131 S. Ct. at 1748; see also Preston v. Ferrer,
 24 552 U.S. 346, 357-58 (2008); Iskanian, 59 Cal. 4th at 369. The FAA also requires that arbitration
 25 agreements be enforced according to the intention of the parties. See, e.g., Mitsubishi Motors
 26 Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 473 U.S. 614, 626 (2008).

27 Section 10(a)(4) provides that arbitration awards may be vacated when arbitrators exceed 28 their powers, “or so imperfectly executed them that a mutual, final and definitive award upon the subject matter submitted was not made.” 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(4) (emphasis added). Section 2 of the FAA refers to arbitrations to settle a “controversy.” 9 U.S.C. § 2.

1. The Re-Adjudication Is The Antithesis Of A “Streamlined Proceeding”

It is readily apparent that the Re-Adjudication does not “facilitate streamlined proceedings.” Concepcion, 131 S. Ct. at 1748. The same critical threshold question was litigated, and then re-litigated, at great expense, and under the procedure adopted in the award it could be relitigated ad infinitum.

The First Adjudication determined the threshold issue after a major expenditure of time, effort and money in briefing, arguing and ruling on the issue. See page 6 above.

Despite a carefully reasoned award demonstrating that there was “no good faith basis” upon which an arbitrator could conclude that the Class was authorized to arbitrate the Claims on a class-wide basis, the process then began all over again -- the day after the issue was adjudicated -- resulting in a second major expenditure of time, effort and money re-briefing and re-arguing the same question because the second arbitrator abjectly refused to defer to the existing adjudication. See pages 7-8 above.

Requiring 23andMe to re-litigate the same threshold question is even more egregious because the question is so important. As the California Court of Appeal noted in Garden Fresh, the question whether an arbitration agreement provides for class arbitration “is vastly more consequential” than even the gateway question whether there is a valid agreement to arbitrate, and held that it must therefore be determined by a court. 231 Cal. App. 4th at 687. Two federal courts of appeal have reached the same conclusion. See Reed Elsevier, Inc. ex rel. LexisNexis Div. v. Crockett, 734 F.3d 594, 599 (6th Cir. 2013), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 2291 (2014); Opalinski v. Robert Half Int'l Inc., 761 F.3d 326, 335 (3d Cir. 2014), cert. denied, 2015 WL 998611 (U.S. Mar. 9, 2015). The Supreme Court has underscored that fact, noting that class arbitration “greatly increases risks to defendants,” results in a process that is “poorly suited to high stakes class litigation,” and “makes the process slower, more costly and more likely to generate a procedural morass.” Concepcion, 131 S. Ct. at 1751-53; see also Stolt-Nielsen, 559

1 U.S. at 686 (listing the “fundamental changes brought about by the shift from bilateral arbitration
2 to class-action arbitration”).

3 Permitting members of the same class to re-litigate the same all-important threshold
4 question until they get a favorable ruling ensures that the process will be “slower, more costly,
5 and more likely to generate a procedural morass.” 131 S. Ct. at 1751. Moreover, the end result 6 of the asymmetric serial re-litigation is likely to be imposition of a cumbersome class action not 7 contemplated or authorized by the arbitration agreement, as happened in this case. See, e.g.,
8 Mitsubishi Motors, 473 U.S. at 628 (“By agreeing to arbitrate . . . [a party] trades the procedures
9 and opportunity for review of the courtroom for the simplicity, informality and expedition of 10 arbitration.”)

11 2. The Process Adopted And Enforced Via Re-Adjudication Contravenes 12 The Intention Of The Parties

13 The FAA was enacted to ensure that arbitration agreements are enforced in accordance 14 with the intention of the parties, and “‘the parties’ intentions control.” Stolt-Nielsen, 559 U.S. at 15 683 (quoting Mitsubishi, 473 U.S. at 626).

16 There is no chance that the parties intended that the threshold question of whether the 17 Arbitration Agreement authorizes class arbitration would be re-litigated in the same controversy
18 involving the same claims and same class until a class member obtained a favorable ruling. As 19 the Supreme Court has emphasized, “a [company] may not be compelled under the FAA to 20 submit to class arbitration unless there is a contractual basis for concluding that the [company]
21 agreed to do so.” Id. at 684 (emphasis in original); see also Concepcion, 131 S. Ct. at 1752 (“We 22 find it hard to believe that defendants would bet the company with no effective means of 23 review”). No company would ever intend such an irrational, unfair and expensive result,
24 particularly when the company is bound by an adverse ruling and class members are not. The 25 lawyers seeking to pursue class action claims and an arbitrator who wanted to preside over a class 26 action proceeding were nevertheless able to impose it.

1 3. The Process Adopted In The Re-Adjudication Does Not Ensure That
 2 The Arbitration Agreement Will Be Enforced According To Its Terms

3 The Re-Adjudication also contravenes the FAA’s fundamental purpose “to ensure that 4 arbitration agreements are enforced according to their terms.” Concepcion, 131 S. Ct. at 1748;
 5 Stolt-Nielsen, 559 U.S. at 664; see, e.g., Volt Info. Sciences, Inc. v. Bd. of Trustees of Leland
 6 Stanford Junior Univ., 489 U.S. 468, 469 (1989). In addressing the FAA’s primary purpose in 7 Mortensen, the Ninth Circuit emphasized the word “‘ensure’ is defined to mean . . . ‘to make 8 sure, certain or safe.’” 722 F.3d at 1159.

9 The award issued in the Re-Adjudication refused to enforce the arbitration agreement
 10 according to its terms, and adopted a process that ensures that result. The terms of the arbitration 11 agreement either authorize class arbitration under the governing law, or they do not authorize it.
 12 The outcome is binary. Permitting one side -- and only one side -- to re-litigate the question until 13 it gets the ruling it desires, irrespective of a prior adjudication of the same question to the 14 contrary, obviously does not ensure that the contract is enforced according to its terms. It does 15 the opposite.

16 4. The Process Adopted In The Re-Adjudication Effectively Requires
 17 The Availability Of Class Arbitration

18 As the Supreme Court held in Concepcion: “Requiring the availability of classwide
 19 arbitration interferes with fundamental attributes of arbitration and thus creates a scheme
 20 inconsistent with the FAA.” 131 S. Ct. at 1748. As this case demonstrates, permitting different
 21 members of the same class to re-litigate the threshold question whether an arbitration agreement
 22 authorizes class action arbitration effectively “require[s] the availability of classwide arbitration.”
 23 It does not matter that one arbitrator follows the law notwithstanding a personal desire to override
 24 it, or that there is only one ruling that can be rendered in good faith. A second arbitrator who is 25 not similarly constrained, and has a financial interest in presiding over a class action, can simply 26 nullify any adjudication in favor of the company.

27 5. The Re-Adjudication Contravenes Section 10(a)(4) Of The FAA

28 Perhaps most important, the Re-Adjudication is contrary to Section 10(a)(4) of the FAA,

1 which expressly authorizes district courts to vacate arbitration awards when the arbitrator
2 “imperfectly executed” his powers such “that a mutual, final and definitive award on the subject
3 matter submitted was not made.” 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(4). By overriding the First Adjudication, and 4 issuing an award that mandates the polar opposite result with respect to the same threshold
5 question in the same controversy, the arbitrator made a mockery of this provision.

6 The “subject matter submitted” in the conflicting adjudications was exactly the same.
7 Members of the identically defined class sought a ruling that the same arbitration agreement
8 authorized the class to assert the same claims against 23andMe on a class-wide basis, as part of 9 the same “controversy” for purposes of section 2 of the FAA (9 U.S.C. § 2). See pp. 5-8 above.

10 By nullifying the First Adjudication, the award created a situation that is the polar 11 opposite of “final and definite,” and destroyed any semblance of “mutuality.” Representatives of 12 the Class can pursue the process indefinitely, without being bound by an adverse ruling. A ruling 13 that the arbitration agreement does not authorize the class to pursue claims as a class is 14 meaningless because other class members (or even the same ones) can continue the process until 15 they find an arbitrator willing to nullify it, while the company is bound by any adverse ruling on 16 the exact same threshold issue.

17 As this case further illustrates, the fact that arbitrators want to conduct class action
18 arbitrations (and have a strong financial stake in the outcome of the threshold determination)
19 makes it likely that counsel seeking to pursue a class arbitration will succeed in nullifying a ruling 20 in favor of the company, irrespective of whether there is any good faith basis for doing so.

21 The lack of -- and inability to obtain -- a mutual, final and definite award results from an 22 “imperfect” execution of the arbitrator’s power in two fundamental respects. First, as noted 23 above, the Re-Adjudication is directly contrary to the policy, requirements and language of the 24 FAA. Second, as shown at pages 16-25 below, the award was rendered in manifest disregard of 25 the law, and is not rationally derived from the language of the Arbitration Agreement.

26 B. The Court Can Determine Which Award Governs

27 When two directly contrary awards are rendered on the same issue in connection with the 28 same essential controversy, the rules that normally restrict judicial review of an arbitration award

1 are relaxed. Arbitrators normally defer to prior rulings on the same issue, but when they depart
2 from that practice -- and one ruling effectively nullifies the other -- the court must consider both
3 awards and determine which one should prevail. That is true irrespective of the fact that the 4 awards were issued in separate proceedings, and only one of them is at issue on the motion to 5 vacate. See Connecticut Light & Power Co. v. Local 420, Int'l Brotherhood of Electrical
6 Workers, AFL-CIO, 718 F.2d 14 (2d Cir. 1983); see also Trailways Lines, Inc. v. Trailways Inc.
7 Joint Council, 807 F.2d 1416 (8th Cir. 1986).

8 As the Second Circuit explained in Connecticut Light & Power, while courts have 9 generally concluded “that arbitrators are not bound by the rationale of earlier decisions and that 10 inconsistency with another award is not enough by itself to justify vacating an award,” the rule is 11 different when the conflicting awards purport to resolve the identical issue regarding the same 12 contract as part of the same dispute. 718 F.2d at 20. The court noted that it was faced with an 13 unusual situation, in that although only one of the awards “was challenged in the present 14 proceeding, a second arbitrator explicitly rejected both [its] reasoning and conclusion.” Id.
15 Accordingly, one of the awards “would for all practical purposes give no weight to [the other 16 arbitrator’s] view of the meaning of the collective bargaining agreement.” The Second Circuit
17 therefore held that the court “must resolve the conflict between the two awards.” Id. at 21.

18 More specifically, Connecticut Power & Light held that “[w]here inconsistent awards
19 have been made, and a need for resolving the conflict is evident, the court must, as a first step, 20 determine whether each award, viewed separately, draws its essence from the contract.” Id. As 21 demonstrated at pages 16-25 below, that is not a close question here. The award issued in the Re-
22 Adjudication cannot be reconciled with the language of the Arbitration Agreement or the 23 controlling case law, and can only have “drawn its essence” from a different source.

24 If both awards draw their essence from the contract, the court must “move to a second step 25 and determine which decision conforms most closely to the intent of the parties,” and “is the most 26 persuasive of the two.” Id. Again, that is not a close question.

1 C. This Court Can Also Defer To The Determination To Be Made In The San
 2 Francisco Superior Court Action

3 As noted at pages 8-9 above, counsel who filed the clause construction motion the first
 4 time has filed an action on behalf of another member of the Class seeking a judicial determination
 5 whether the arbitration agreement provides for class arbitration. Ex. O. The San Francisco
 6 Superior Court Action is based on a recent California Court of Appeal decision holding that the 7 threshold question of whether an arbitration agreement provides for class arbitration is a threshold
 8 question to be decided by a court.

9 The San Francisco Superior Court will determine the threshold question whether the 10 Arbitration Agreement authorizes the Class to assert classwide claims (yet again) on a motion for 11 summary judgment, and a hearing on the motion for summary judgment is scheduled for June 1, 12 2015. If the Court is for any reason not inclined to vacate the Davis-Hudson award based on the 13 procedure prescribed in Connecticut Light & Power, 23andMe requests that the Court defer ruling 14 on this motion pending a judicial determination of the question, and apply the state court ruling in 15 this proceeding.

16 D. The Arbitrator's Award Is Completely Irrational And Exhibits A Manifest
 17 Disregard Of Controlling Law.

18 Ninth Circuit precedent authorizes courts to vacate an arbitrator's award when the award
 19 is "completely irrational," or exhibits a "manifest disregard of law." Comedy Club, Inc. v. Improv
 20 W. Associates, 553 F.3d 1277, 1290 (9th Cir. 2009); accord Johnson v. Wells Fargo Home
 21 Mortg., Inc., 635 F.3d 401, 414 & n.10 (9th Cir. 2011).

22 When an arbitrator recognizes the applicable law, but ignores it, the award should be 23 vacated. Comedy Club, 553 F.3d at 1290. Thus, in Comedy Club, the Ninth Circuit vacated an 24 arbitrator's award where the arbitrator, while aware of controlling case law, nevertheless 25 erroneously interpreted it in such a way as to render it inapplicable, and disregarded well-
 26 established case law. See id. at 1293.

27 "If the arbitrator's decision 'strains credulity' or 'does not rise to the standard of barely 28 colorable,' a court may conclude that the arbitrator 'willfully flouted the governing law by

1 refusing to apply it.” Stolt-Nielsen SA v. AnimalFeeds Int’l Corp., 548 F.3d 85, 92-93 (2d Cir.
 2 2008) (citations omitted), rev’d on other grounds, 559 U.S. 662 (2010); accord Pearson Dental
 3 Supplies, Inc. v. Super. Ct., 48 Cal. 4th 665, 677 n.3 (2010).

4 While merely establishing that the arbitrator misinterpreted the law will not suffice to 5 vacate an arbitration award, an arbitrator’s decision is nevertheless “subject to challenge if the 6 decision fairly can be said to be ‘completely irrational.’” Freightliner, LLC v. Teamsters Local 7 305, 336 F. Supp. 2d 1118, 1126 (D. Or. 2004) (quoting Todd Shipyards Corp. v. Cunard Line,
 8 Ltd., 943 F.2d 1056, 1060 (9th Cir. 1991)). Vacatur is therefore appropriate when an arbitrator’s
 9 interpretation of “well defined, explicit and clearly applicable” controlling precedent is irrational -
 10 even though the arbitrator nominally gives “lip service” to the law in his award. See id. at 1127.

11 Here, the arbitrator did not merely render an award on which reasonable minds could 12 disagree. There was no “good faith” basis for the award. As was the case in Freightliner and 13 Comedy Club, the arbitrator nominally addressed well-defined and explicit controlling case law, 14 then disregarded it completely and imposed his own notions of what the law “should be.” That is 15 “an approach tantamount to ‘ignoring the law’” or “impos[ing] his own policy preference.”
 16 Freightliner, 336 F. Supp. 2d at 1127; Stolt-Nielsen, 559 U.S. at 676.

17 Indeed, the second award disregards a plethora of controlling Federal and California case
 18 law -- the same controlling Federal and California case law that Mr. Sochynsky held provided 19 “no reasonable alternative (i.e. one that would be based on a good faith interpretation of the 20 parties’ agreement” that would allow for class arbitration under the identical bilateral arbitration
 21 agreement at issue. Ex. H at 8-9 (emphasis added). Based on a series of controlling cases that (1) 22 cannot be distinguished from this one, and (2) uniformly hold that the language contained in the 23 Arbitration Agreement does not authorize class arbitration, Mr. Sochynsky set aside his personal 24 preference for class arbitration because he was “obliged to follow the law,” and the controlling 25 “legal precedent” dictated the ruling issued in the First Adjudication. Ex. H at 8, 13.

26 While that manifest disregard of the law provides more than sufficient grounds for 27 vacating the award, the arbitrator also disregarded the FAA in several fundamental respects. See 28 pages 10-14 above. The award should be vacated on that basis as well.

1 1. No Rational Interpretation of Controlling Case Law Could Possibly 2 Justify The Arbitrator's Award.

3 As the Supreme Court has repeatedly held, “the differences between bilateral and class-
 4 action arbitration are too great for arbitrators to presume, consistent with their limited powers
 5 under the FAA, that the parties’ mere silence on the issue of class-action arbitration constitutes 6 consent to resolve their disputes in class proceedings.” Stolt-Nielsen, 559 U.S. at 687.
 7 Accordingly, class arbitration is permitted only when “the parties agreed to authorize class
 8 arbitration.” Id. (emphasis in original).

9 A virtual avalanche of California cases applying Stolt-Nielsen have without exception held
 10 that arbitration agreements that -- exactly like the Arbitration Agreement here -- are cast
 11 exclusively in bilateral terms and do not refer to class or group arbitration do not authorize class
 12 arbitration. See, e.g., Nelsen v. Legacy Partners Residential, Inc., 207 Cal. App. 4th 1115, 1128-
 13 31 (2012); Kinecta Alternative Fin. Solutions, Inc. v. Super. Ct., 205 Cal. App. 4th 506, 517-19
 14 (2012); Network Capital Funding Corp. v. Papke, 178 Cal. Rptr. 3d 658, 669 (2014), review
 15 granted on other grounds by 340 P.3d 1043 (Cal. 2015);³ Rivera v. Hilton Worldwide, Inc., 2013
 16 WL 6230604, at *4-5 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 26, 2013); Ramos v. Fry's Elecs., Inc., 2014 WL
 17 6269307 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 17, 2014); Whalley v. The Wet Seal, Inc., 2013 WL 6057679, at *4-
 18 6 (Cal. Ct. App. Nov. 15, 2013); Arroyo v. Riverside Auto Holdings, 2013 WL 4997488, at *3-4
 19 (Cal. Ct. App. Sept. 13, 2013); McElroy v. Tenet Health Care Corp., 2013 WL 4482928, at *6-7
 20 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 21, 2013); Reyes v. Liberman Broad., Inc., 208 Cal. App. 4th 1537, 1543-45
 21 (2012), review granted on other grounds and then dismissed in light of Iskanian, 59 Cal. 4th 348,
 22 366 (2014); Lopez v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., 2012 WL 1655720, at *7-8 (C.D. Cal. May 4, 23 2012); Chico v. Hilton Worldwide, Inc., 2014 WL 5088240, at *12 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 7, 2014).

24 Indeed, California cases applying Stolt-Nielsen have unanimously concluded that bilateral 25 language in arbitration agreements affirmatively preclude class arbitration. Like the dozens of 26 California cases cited above, the 23andMe Arbitration Agreement is cast exclusively in two-party

27 ³ Federal courts “may consider unpublished [California] state decisions.” Emps. Ins. of Wausau v. Granite 28 State Ins. Co., 330 F.3d 1214, 1220 n.8 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Beeman v. Anthem Prescription Mgmt., LLC, 689 F.3d 1002, 1008 n.2 (9th Cir. 2012).

1 terms:

2 Any Disputes shall be resolved by final and binding arbitration under the rules
3 and auspices of the American Arbitration Association, to be held in San 4 Francisco, California, in English, with a written decision stating the legal 5 reasoning issued by the arbitrator(s) at either party's request, with arbitration costs 6 and reasonable documented attorneys' costs of both parties to be borne by the 7 party that ultimately loses. Either party may obtain injunctive relief (Ex. B at 8 ¶ 28(b))

9 It uses the terms “you” and “your” to refer to a single claimant: “[A]ny disputes with 10 23andMe arising out of or relating to the Agreement (“Disputes”) shall be governed by California
11 law regardless of your country or origin or where you access 23andMe” Id. The agreement
12 does not mention class actions, groups or anything other than bilateral adjudication of individual 13 claims.

14 Based on language identical to that contained in the 23andMe arbitration agreement (“at 15 either party's request”), and the fact that the arbitration agreement identified only two parties,
16 Nelsen held that the arbitration clause addressed the claimant's rights and obligations vis a vis the 17 company, “not those of other employees or groups of employees.” 207 Cal. App. 4th at 1129-30
18 & n.7. Applying Stolt-Nielsen, the California Court of Appeal held that the use of two-party
19 language barred class arbitration. Id. at 1131. As Nelsen explained, two-party language 20 precludes class-action arbitration because it “unambiguously negates” any intention to engage in 21 a class-wide adjudication. Id. at 1130.

22 Kinecta applied Stolt-Nielsen and reached the same result based on the reasoning
23 employed in Nelsen. The arbitration agreement there referred to two parties: the company and 24 “me.” 205 Cal. App. 4th at 511. The California Court of Appeal granted an employer's petition
25 for a writ of mandate overturning an order permitting class arbitration, based on the two-party
26 language: “The arbitration provision identifies only two parties to the agreement,” and makes no
27 reference to “employee groups or other employees,” but “instead refers exclusively to ‘I,’ ‘me,’ 28 and ‘my’” Id. at 517. As was the case in Kinecta, the 23andMe Arbitration Agreement identifies two parties, and refers exclusively to the claimant (although it uses “you” instead of “I”), and does not refer to others or groups.

Similarly, Whalley ruled that two-party language in an arbitration agreement precludes a

1 finding that the parties agreed to class action adjudication under Stolt-Nielsen. 2013 WL 6057679
 2 at *4-5. As in the 23andMe Agreement, the arbitration agreement referred to the company, and
 3 used the terms “you” and “your” to refer to the individual. Id. Based on that language, the 4 California Court of Appeal held that the agreement was “not susceptible to an interpretation that 5 class actions were authorized or agreed upon.” Id. at *5.

6 Rivera and McElroy likewise ruled that two-party language in an arbitration agreement
 7 “demonstrates [that] arbitration was limited to disputes between plaintiff and defendant.” Rivera,
 8 2013 WL 6230604, at *5; McElroy, 2013 WL 4482928, at *7; see also Chico, 2014 WL 5088240,
 9 at *12 (“[The] Arbitration Agreements repeatedly refer to Plaintiff in the singular and make no
 10 reference to employee groups, putative class members, other employees, or other employees’
 11 claims or disputes. Accordingly, the Court concludes that the . . . Arbitration Agreements do not 12 authorize class arbitration, and that Plaintiff shall individually arbitrate his claims.”).

13 As Mr. Sochynsky acknowledged, there is no conceivable basis upon which this case can 14 be distinguished from the California Court of Appeal’s decisions in Nelsen, Kinecta, Whalley, 15 Rivera, McElroy and Reyes (among others). This is plainly not a case involving an unlikely but 16 nevertheless rational interpretation: There is literally nothing in the 23andMe Arbitration
 17 Agreement that could possibly support a ruling that the company agreed to authorize class action
 18 arbitration.

19 2. The “Rationale” Of The Arbitrator’s Award Underscores The Reasons 20 It Must Be Vacated.

21 The arbitrator based his award on three primary bases. First, he chose without explanation
 22 to disregard the plethora of controlling and well-defined case law because some of the cases
 23 involved “employment disputes” rather than a consumer dispute. Ex. A at 7. Second, the reasons
 24 cited by the arbitrator as a basis for “distinguishing” identical language are facially baseless.
 25 Third, the arbitrator claimed to find it significant that the Arbitration Agreement referred to “any 26 disputes” (surrounded by strictly bilateral language), but failed to follow Network Capital’s 27 guidance that this language did not evidence an intent by the parties to permit class arbitration.

28 Similarly, the arbitrator ruled that the Arbitration Agreement’s explicit exclusion of 1 intellectual property disputes from the scope of the Agreement, but its silence with respect to 2 class arbitration, evidenced an intent to permit class arbitration -- again, an irrational conclusion

 3 of law directly contrary to controlling precedent. Finally, he asserted that the capitalized term
 4 “Agreement,” despite being surrounded by strictly bilateral language, somehow referred to a
 5 single agreement between 23andMe and all of its customers.⁴

6 Each of the arbitrator’s bases for the award is not only wrong, but so irrational and such a 7 departure from a good faith interpretation of the law and the parties’ Agreement, as to constitute 8 reversible manifest disregard for the law. Despite giving “lip service” to the law, the arbitrator’s 9 interpretation of the contract and cases are so irrational that they not only strain credulity, but 10 defy it altogether.

11 a. The Arbitrator’s Reference To The Fact That Some Cases
 12 Involved Employment Contracts Is Irrational, Unsupported
 13 And Unsupportable.

14 As the first “explanation” of his radical departure from the controlling case law, the 15 arbitrator stated that it was “noteworthy” that some of the cases cited by 23andMe were 16 employment disputes, while the dispute at issue involves a retailer and consumer. Ex. A at 7.
 17 That is it. The arbitrator did not attempt to provide legal or factual basis to support his 18 distinction, and there is none. The governing rules do not -- and cannot -- depend on the type of 19 contract in which the arbitration agreement was included.

20 b. The Arbitrator’s Attempt To Distinguish The Language In The 21 Contract From Binding Cases Was Facially Baseless.

22 The award notes that the arbitration agreements in Kinecta and Network Capital used
 23 words like “I,” “me,” and “my,” whereas the Arbitration Agreement here used words like “you,” 24 “your,” “either party,” and “both parties.” Ex. A at 8-9. There is no colorable basis for

25 ⁴ In fact, in several instances, the arbitrator even misquoted the arbitration agreement by failing to 26 include bilateral language contained in the exact same sentences the arbitrator was quoting,
 27 instead replacing such language with ellipses. This reflects either impermissible and evident
 28 partiality justifying vacatur, see 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(2), or such a radical disregard for controlling precedent that it evinces the arbitrator’s imposition of his own policy preference for class arbitration rather than the fulfillment of his duty to faithfully interpret the law and the parties’ contract.

distinguishing words like “you” and “your” from “I,” “me,” or “my,” and all of the language in the Arbitration Agreement is exclusively bilateral.

Moreover, Network Capital did not cite or rely upon “I,” “me” or “my” (or any other bilateral language) as the basis for its ruling that there was no contractual basis for determining that the parties agreed to class arbitration. Rather, it held that class arbitration was not authorized under Stolt-Nielsen and the FAA because -- as in this case -- there was no contract language or extrinsic evidence that might lead to that result. See 178 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 670.

The award also manifestly disregards cases like Nelsen and Whalley, which involved arbitration agreements that used two-party language identical to that found in the 23andMe Arbitration Agreement. In holding that the arbitration agreement did not authorize class arbitration because it uses bilateral language, the California Court of Appeal in Nelsen emphasized that the agreement, like the 23andMe Arbitration Agreement, “provides for an appeal of the arbitrator’s award ‘at either party’s written request.’” 207 Cal. App. 4th at 1130 (italics in original). Similarly, in holding that two-party language in an arbitration agreement precludes a ruling that the parties agreed to class action adjudication, the California Court of Appeal in Whalley emphasized that the agreement, like the Arbitration Agreement, used the terms “you” and “your” to refer to the individual. 2013 WL 6057679 at *4-5. Based on that identical language, the Court of Appeal held that the agreement was “not susceptible to an interpretation that class actions were authorized or agreed upon.” Id. at *5.

Moreover, all of the many California Court of Appeal decisions that the arbitrator manifestly disregarded relied on the fact that the arbitration agreements -- like the Arbitration Agreement -- did not refer to others or groups of claimants. The award says nothing whatsoever about that critical fact, which under controlling law further demonstrates the absence of the contractual basis required to impose class arbitration.

c. The Arbitration Agreement’s Reference to “Any Disputes,” and Its Exclusion of Certain Others, Manifestly Disregarded Controlling Precedent.

The arbitrator’s statement that the controlling California decisions did not consider the expressio unius est exclusio alterius doctrine (Ex. A at 12-13) is patently incorrect, irrelevant and

1 irrational. For example, the arbitration agreement in Network Capital required the parties “to 2 submit ‘any claim, dispute, and/or controversy’ between them to binding arbitration ‘[i]nclud[ing]
 3 . . . all disputes, whether based in tort, contract, statute . . . , equitable law, or otherwise,’ and 4 ‘[t]he sole exception [was] for claims before the [National Labor Relations Board].’” 178 Cal.
 5 Rptr. 3d at 669-70. The plaintiff in Network Capital argued that “the parties’ intent to authorize 6 class arbitration is established by the [a]rbitration [a]greement’s broad language requiring the 7 parties to submit ‘any claim, dispute, and/or controversy’ to arbitration and the parties’ omission
 8 of class arbitration from the narrow list of exceptions to that broad obligation.” Id. at 670.

9 The California Court of Appeal flatly rejected that argument because it “ignores the 10 governing law on the requirements for submitting claims to class arbitration,” and held that the 11 parties’ arbitration agreement did not authorize class arbitration. Id. (emphasis added). The same 12 controlling law requires the same result here, and to reach a contrary result clearly constitutes a 13 manifest disregard of that controlling law.

14 Similarly, Kinecta held that class arbitration was not authorized even though the 15 arbitration agreement at issue expressly excluded injunctive relief and certain other types of 16 claims from the scope of the agreement, but did not expressly exclude class arbitrations. See 205
 17 Cal. App. 4th 511 n.1, 518-19. Reyes also held that class arbitration was not authorized even 18 though “[a]s in Kinecta, class actions [were] not listed among the expressly excluded claims.”
 19 146 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 622. Indeed, none of the arbitration agreements in the California cases listed 20 at page 18 above contained class arbitration waivers.

21 The award’s ruling (at 13) that the absence of an explicit class arbitration waiver in the 22 Arbitration Agreement indicates an intention to allow class arbitration is also directly contrary to 23 Stolt-Nielsen. Stolt-Nielsen explicitly held that “the differences between bilateral and class-action 24 arbitration are too great for arbitrators to presume, consistent with their limited powers under the 25 FAA, that the parties’ mere silence on the issue of class action arbitration constitutes consent to 26 resolve their disputes in class proceedings.” 559 U.S. at 687. The question is not whether the 27 agreement “preclude[s] class arbitration,” but rather whether the company “agreed” to submit to 28 class arbitration. Id. at 684 (italics in original).

Recognizing that unequivocal holding, numerous California Court of Appeal decisions have uniformly and explicitly rejected the exact argument relied on by the arbitrator in manifest disregard of the law. See, e.g., Rivera, 2013 WL 6230604, at *5 (rejecting argument that “class arbitration [can be] implied by the fact defendant, who is far more sophisticated, drafted the Agreement and has ‘sole responsibility’ for that, did not include a specific waiver”); Arroyo, 2013 WL 4997488, at *5 (rejecting argument that “the fact that an express waiver of class claims was not included in the agreement gives rise to the necessary conclusion that the agreement intended to permit class arbitration”); Ramos, 2014 WL 6269307, at *13 (rejecting argument that the absence of class waiver “demonstrates ‘an implied agreement to class arbitration exists,’” because “this argument is foreclosed by Stolt-Nielsen”).

d. The Term “Agreement” or “agreement,” Cannot Rationally Form a Basis for Concluding that the Parties Intended to Authorize Class Arbitration.

Finally, in ruling that the Arbitration Agreement authorizes class arbitration, the award states that the Arbitration Agreement “uses the capitalized Agreement indicating that it intended to apply to disputes covering all customers.” Ex. A at 9. According to the arbitrator, “[w]hen capitalized it refers to the form of Agreement applicable to all of 23andMe’s customers and in lower case it refers to an ‘agreement’ between a particular individual and 23andMe.” Id. at 10.

That statement has no foundation or basis whatsoever in the language of the Arbitration Agreement or in the law, and further underscores the fact that the award is not rationally derived from the language of the contract. A review of the terms of service in which the Arbitration Agreement is contained shows clearly, the capitalized and lower case terms refer -- and can only refer -- to the Terms of Service. That is the only agreement between a claimant and 23andMe. Moreover, a cursory review of the TOS makes clear that “agreement” and “Agreement” refer to the same contract, and that the inconsistent capitalization is due to carelessness. The arbitrator’s attempt to create two agreements on that basis is inexplicable.

Furthermore, immediately after using the capitalized word “Agreement,” the Arbitration Agreement uses the terms “you” and “your” to refer to a single claimant: “[A]ny disputes with 23andMe arising out of or relating to the Agreement (“Disputes”) shall be governed by California

1 law regardless of your country or origin or where you access 23andMe”

2 The irrationality of the award’s conclusion is made evident by Section 27h of the 3 Agreement, also quoted by the Award, which states “If you do not want to agree to changes to the 4 Agreement, you can terminate the Agreement at any time. . . .” (Ex. A at 9.) Thus, the term
5 Agreement is again surrounded by clearly bilateral language, and cannot possibly refer to 6 “disputes covering all customers.” After all, how could any single customer have the authority to 7 terminate the “Agreement” between 23andMe and all its remaining customers? The arbitrator’s 8 explanation not only “strains credulity,” but defies all logic whatsoever.

9 e. The Arbitrator’s Quotation Of The Arbitration Agreement
10 Underscores The Fatal Defects.

11 The award repeatedly omits important bilateral language immediately following or 12 preceding its selective quotes. For example, on page 8, the arbitrator cites the following clause in 13 the Arbitration Agreement in an attempt to distinguish it from controlling precedent, pointing out 14 that it contains no bilateral language: “any disputes with 23andMe arising out of or related to the 15 Agreement (Disputes) shall be governed” Likewise, to support his construction of the term
16 “Agreement” as referring to “all of 23andMe’s customers,” the arbitrator again selectively quotes
17 a different portion of the same sentence of the Agreement as follows: “Except for any disputes 18 relating to intellectual property rights, . . . any disputes with 23andMe arising or relating to the 19 Agreement (Disputes) shall be” (Ex. A at 9 (underlining in original).) Yet, the full clause 20 actually continues to read “shall be governed by California law regardless of your country of 21 origin or where you access 23andMe” reflecting clear bilateral language in the same 22 sentence, which the arbitrator neglected to quote.

23 IV. CONCLUSION

24 For the foregoing reasons, 23andMe respectfully requests that the Court VACATE the 25 Partial Award regarding clause construction, issued by Arbitrator Robert L. Brent in AAA Case
26 No. 74-20-1400-0032. Alternatively, Petitioner respectfully requests that the Court stay this 27 proceeding and the arbitration until the Superior Court for the County of San Francisco issues a 28 judicial determination regarding whether the Arbitration Agreement permits class arbitration.

1 Dated: March 20, 2015

Respectfully submitted,
ORRICK, HERRINGTON & SUTCLIFFE LLP

2
3 By: /s/ Robert P. Varian
4 ROBERT P. VARIAN
Attorneys for Petitioner, 23ANDME, INC.
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28